Brookline. The writer is sorry that Anne has a bad cold. Says Mrs. Loring and Anna (?) are angry with Stephen S. Foster "for his abuse of Chas. Sumner." Charles Follen wrote to F. for an explanation. Says that letters from England deplore the hostile attitude of the London Times toward the war (Civil War?). Ends with family news.

To Richard Davis Webb

No.30

Leicester, Mass.. The writer discusses a business account with Mr. Webb. Tells of the great success of Mrs. Maria W. Chapman's "financial effort." Still objects to Mrs. Chapman's method of terminating the Anti-Slavery Fair. Says the smaller local fairs will be continued. Mr. Webb's son went to Australia and the writer's son to Ceylon. Anne Warren Weston has gone to visit her uncle, Joshua Bates, in London. The writer discusses William Henry Channing's association with Frederick Douglass. Samuel J. May reports that George Thompson is sick and destitute. Rev. S. May Jr. hopes for a revival of the A-S League and lists a possible nucleus of members.

Greenfield, Kilgibbin, Co. of Dublin, (Ireland). The writer heard from Mary Estlin that Lucia Weston was very unwell. Tells about moving to his new address. Says that "Greenfield covers about 12 or 14 acres, it is 7 1/2 miles from Dublin & the Three Rock Mountain about 1100 feet high, rises almost from the end of our garden." Talks at length about Greenfield. "It was in July last my son Richard sailed for Australia" Wants to know the state of Lucia Weston's health. Sarah P. Remond stayed with Mrs. Mary Edmandson and "was accompanied to Ireland by Mr. Robson ... He is postmaster of Warrington & took a trip to the U. States last summer" The writer describes him. Sarah Remond went to visit Mary Shackleton, who had returned from Ohio. Tells of the unhappy experiences of W. G. Allen and the flight of some Italian refugees to England. Says that Mary Estlin "is very snug in her little mansion of Hereford House, Durdham Downs, where she is generally playing the hostess to some of her very wide circle of female friends." Believes that the Anti-Slavery Advocate could not survive without Mary Estlin's help. "This projected change of residence from Brunswick St. to the country will be a final change ..." Supposes that the paralysis of George Thompson's hands prevents him from writing letters. Asks if the addressee ever visits the Brownings. Considers Thompson very improvident. The winter in Dublin has been very mild. Asks if Anne Chapman is still with the August Laugels. Has a good collection of stereoscopic slides. S. J. May is in Rome with his son, whose health is

• Bolton, England. The writer has forwarded, through Rebecca Whitelegge of Manchester, the subscription from Bolton to the Boston Anti-Slavery fund. Regrets that they were not able to do much in Manchester this year. Requests more than one copy of the paper containing a report of the annual meeting and the list of subscribers. Bolton has done pretty well, considering the many adverse opinions to be met with respecting the Anti-Slavery movement. Sarah P. Remond, lecturing at Bolton "gave great satisfaction." The writer became acquainted with her, as she spent a night "under our humble roof."

New York. The writer sends a copy of his sketch of Garrison, "as stereotyped for the New Cyclopedia." Since neither of the editors appreciated Garrison and one affected to despise him, the writer was careful to observe the rules of the work, so as to prevent mutilation of the manuscript. Regrets that the sketches of Dr. and Mrs. Follen in the Cyclopaedia are "so meagre and unsatisfactory." Explains how this came about. "The Harper's Ferry affair ... absorbs the Standard as it absorbs the mind of the country ... The invasion was God's own earthquake, and Slavery trembles to its very foundations from the shock."

Greenfield, Dublin Co., (Ireland). The writer's son Richard came home today from his travels. He is "full of acknowledgment of all the attention & hospitality he met with from my American friends." Richard met F. Douglass in Rochester. Douglass said "he hoped I would not bear spite," referring to "a furious attack upon me which he published in his paper in consequence of that unfortunate statement respecting Julia Griffiths which H. C. W. (Henry C. Wright) sent me but which could not be substantiated." Douglass told Richard that he intended giving up his paper. Richard spent a night at Stephen S. Foster's house, and was greatly pleased with Abby Kelley

•Bristol (England). Gives an admiring account of Miss (Sarah Parker) Remond's lecture. The writer, with evident strong anti-slavery convictions, excuses his lack of activity in anti-slavery movements, stating that he has worked in the fields of education, temperance, and the treatment of criminals. The writer also confesses that such meetings, as the one at which Miss Remond spoke, excite him so much as to incapacitate him. At this meeting the writer repeated what he had understood from the addressee - that the poet Longfellow had "struck out from his collection of poems every passage relating to slavery for an edition published to circulate

Two young men, Lebarne and Eldridge, mounted guard in the parlor, "Phebe running between Ann & the men." Describes the unpacking of a box addressed to Mr. Wendell Phillips, which "might be a box of detonating powder," and which actually contained a dead cat. Found Lebarne a very sensible fellow. The newspapers called him John Brown's son, who walked next to Wendell Phillips. "These men have all the agreeable excitement of Schiller's Robbers ..." Wendell came home at 9 am. Country people did not know there had been a mob. Tells of her immediate plans. Reports on dispute with Mary who disagreed with Mrs. Chapman's claim that the house was hers, insisting that it belonged to "the Children."

St. Germain. The writer received the addressee's letter at St. Germain, where she has been staying with Lady Elgin. The present letter will be transported by the writer's cousin, Barbara, who is about to marry M. Bodechen, whom she met in Algeria. The writer refers to a "little letter" from the addressee to "my cousin Florence Nightingale," apparently asking her to write for the Liberty Bell. The writer points out that, if the addressee had been to see Florence Nightingale two or three times, she "would not have asked her to write her name-much less anything requiring a decided effort ..." Florence Nightingale could do it. "She is very much worn exhausted & fevered in her physical frame." Describes the impression Miss Nightingale makes on the men who consult her. She has been in London, "working silently at different reforms," besides setting in order her reports from Crimean days, and has been occupied with a commission appointed to inquire into the sanitary state of the army. "I know all this-I was with her in the spring before coming to Paris ... & I wrote a quantity of letters mostly to poor souls sending strange petitions ..." The writer thanks the addressee for news of Harriet Martineau, whom she praises. Has seen the addressee's son "looking cheery & hearty to." Sends love to Mrs. Elizabeth Follen and Miss Susan Cabot.

a Boston. Is not free of catarrhal attacks. Explains his editorial policy. Is anxious to print the "amazing outpouring of public sentiment ... in relation to John Brown." Declines S. J. M.'s invitation to give Anti-Slavery lectures in Syracuse on account of the distance, expense and winter weather. Has declined an invitation to the annual meeting at Albany. However, as the Woman's Rights Convention will be held at Albany on Feb.3-4, he is tempted to revoke his decision and go to Albany and Syracuse, but cannot pledge himself to do so yet. The Executive Committee will send Anti-Slavery books to England, at S. J. M.'s suggestion. Gerrit Smith is nearly restored to health.

New Bedford (Mass.). The writer was prevented in the last minute from attending the festival. Mr. (William Henry) Furness preached the ordination sermon for Mr. Potter — "the most beautiful sermon I ever heard." The writer praises the anti-slavery spirit of Mr. Potter. The Lyceum lectures have, with a few exceptions, been miserable. (Wendell) Phillips gave a "powerful & beautiful lecture on John Brown." The writer describes the skating rage in New Bedford.

Boston. The writer discusses the illness of Mary Weston.
 Tells of Wendell Phillips' handling of Anne W. Weston's affairs. Gives a long account of a tax controversy between Weymouth and Boston. Distributed 25 tracts. Someone named Day-ward blamed the writer for not putting up more of a fight at a meeting on the 24th. Talks about the "Mobocrats" and one Redpath. Objects to yielding a "hair's-breadth" to the opposition. Discusses, in a conversation with Ann Terry, the advisability of giving advice to one's friends. Talks about the usefulness of some of the recent Anti-Slavery meetings.
 Mentions a continuance of the John Brown meeting and refers again to Redpath.

Concord, (Mass.). Deals with the attempted arrest, by U. S. officers, of Franklin B. Sanborn of Concord for refusing to obey the summons to appear before the Harper's Ferry Investigating Committee. "One of the officers told the Deputy Sheriff that he had been in all kinds of mobs and in all kinds of danger, but he never felt in such fear before - Those manacled hands which he was obliged to hold up over the heads of the crowd on account of the pain caused by the handcuffs being too tight aroused the crowd to great indignation." The writer ran down the street, crying "Murder, Murder, help, help." Mr. Sanborn "owed his deliverance mainly to his sister and Mr. Bigelow. Mr. B. is a steady blacksmith and he fought with „Boston. The writer discusses the speeches of George Thompson, William Henry Seward, and Frederick Douglass. Says the Boston Anti-Slavery Office does not have a complete file of the A-S Standard. Is sending some books to be distributed in various places in England, the idea being to form the nuclei of A-S libraries. Asks Mr. Webb for advice as to where to locate the libraries. Gives a tentative list. Discusses the problem of starting his son out in life. Has not heard from him for a long time. Garrison may go to England. Expects the Democrats to elect Stephen Arnold Douglas. Says he has tried to curb Henry C. Wright's tendency to make anti-religious statements.
